

2009 Mount Langi Ghiran Langi Shiraz

Reviews

If there's one Victorian shiraz to put in your cellar each year, this is it. An engrossing attention to detail delivers super bright, exotic, aromatic spices that then lead you to powerfully dark and ripe cherry blue fruits, all seamlessly intertwined. Just brilliant.

Density, precision and complexity are all hallmarks of the '09 Langi shiraz, which is made from treasured old vines originally planted on the sandy granite soils next to the winery. Complex, fragrant, spice-driven lift, plenty of florals and fine-ground spices, a light, peppery edge and deeply ripened plum, black-cherry and blackberry fruits. The palate has ripeness and depth, with precise, fine tannins carrying plum and dary-cherry fruits to a very long, juicy red-fruit finish. Full of promise.

Outstanding vivid crimson-purple; the perfumed bouquet is exquisite, with red and black fruits in a swathe of violets and rose petals, then a supremely elegant and intense palate, the finish exceptionally long. Clearly should have won the Jimmy Watson trophy '10.

'... Tremendous depth combined with a sense of delicacy. The flavours are tightly knit and give the convincing impression that they just "belong". It's complexly spiced but seasoned to perfection. The minerality, evident on back palate, is both a flavour and a shape – but perhaps more important than either of those is the sense of clean refreshment that it imparts. When the finish eventually lets up it begs you to take another sip.

The score is conservative. It's a young wine with a very exciting future. To be released in September. '
